Problem

Our information is managed by centralized banking entities that monitor our financial activity. In 1980 the profits of banking represented 20% of all the profits of large corporations, today it is more than 40%. Bulky fees, poor privacy, late payments and bad banking practices are examples of the outdated traditional system.

Solution

The goal of Altindex is to return the lost trust in the industry and create a new transparent monetary transmission and storage network.

The portfolio developed by Altindex will have multiple characteristics and uses: it will offer privacy and absolute control over the deposited funds, blockchain transparency with which it will be able to track the current performance of its assets and its exact location within the network, and other functions such as instant international transactions .

Product

Altindex offers ALX, a simple way to gain diversified exposure in the cryptocurrency market, it is an autonomous fund that links the price of the token with the current value of the top twenty most popular token (ie, the top twenty token with greater market capitalization).

- Automation and functionality.
- Low commissions, 0.5% anual.
- Security and blockchain transparency.

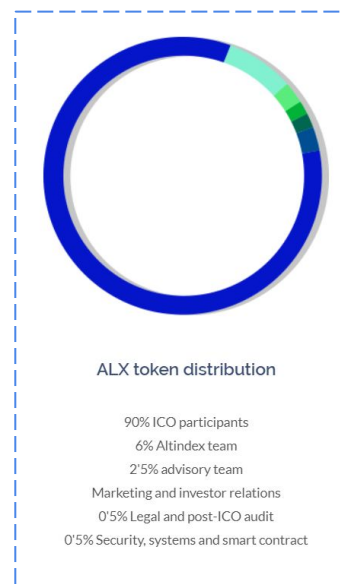

Market

Altindex offers a transparent, efficient, private and secure investment system. Aimed at managed fund managers and retail clients.

Vision

The goal of Altindex is to apply an effective modernization of the current banking system. Privacy and control over the deposited funds themselves are services that have been diluted over time.

ALX, the token with which Altindex operates, offers a value backed by the most important cryptocurrencies in the market, is the first "stablecoin" of the digital generation that will allow interactive multi-platform applications through the blockchain of Ethereum, its future application can take multiple functions.
